Los Cuadernos del CILHA have passed a new evaluation of the organisms that supervise the academic quality of the periodic publications. The CAICYT - Argentine Center of Scientific and Technological Information has extended the permanency of this publication in the Basic Core, in the category 1 and therefore we continue in SCIELO (Scientific Electronic Library Online). It is a good news for the whole work team of the Notebooks, for this reason we want to share it with our readers.

In this occasion our publication puts into consideration of the scientific community a dossier titled: "Trends, perspectives and current challenges of The Colonial Studies" that has been in charge of Dra. Laura Catelli. The gathering of the papers that compose the dossier has had the objective of bringing up to date the discussion of the Colonial Studies, having in mind what Catelli writes: "the colonial critique has had a role distinctly less visible than the latinamericanism, the decolonial thought and the poscoloniales Latin-American studies". The reasons in order that this certain emptiness that has taken place are multicasuals. Another important perspective that outlines this set of works is to take again the "crisis of the colonial studies" of the 80's that implies the redefinition of the object of study, operative theories, documents and other critical "appliances" that constitute a field of studies. We believe that it is a question of a very valuable effort and a significant contribution to the literary Latin-American studies.

As for other published works they raise writers of the historical vanguard as Gonzalez Tuñón or closer, the polemic Fernando Vallejo. Likewise this volume incorporates an interview to the writer Laura Esquivel. We hope that the number has accomplished with the expectations of a Latin-American literature magazine that procures the combination of the quality with the debate of relevant topics.
